About the Author Jason Nickels has been a chilli enthusiast since they were forced upon him in early childhood. In his younger days he made all the mistakes a novice grower is likely to make. Luckily he learned from these mistakes and extensive travel to South America in his 20s only served to enhance his knowledge and experience of chillies. His hobby grew and in 2003 he was a founder of South Devon Chilli Farm, a commercial chilli grower and supplier of seeds and chilli plants to domestic growers in the U.K. He has made numerous TV appearances, written magazine features and delivered talks on chilli growing to enthusiastic audiences. His experience and knowledge of the challenges faced by novice and domestic chilli growers is unparalleled. Jason has now retired from commercial farming but still explores chilli growing on a domestic scale whilst writing on the subject.
