Jo Denbury : Havens and Hideaways before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Havens and Hideaways:

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Havens and HideawaysBy jim pattersonThis book provides a review of very basic building techniques and a great advertisement of the products the author sells. Does not provide much detail on ways to make a small space livable or interior design details that show the creative side of small space construction. Would probably do better to look at books detailing sailboat interiors if you are looking for creativity in small spaces.2 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Cottages, CabinsBy M. L. HainesNot exactly what I was looking for. I was looking for ideas for small cottages and cabins to build for a customer who was looking to build a kids house in the back yard.13 of 13 people found the following review helpful. Disappointed in NebraskaBy Sherrie GregoryThis was a large disappointment. Soooo many pages taken up with nothing on them but a photo of sky..... earth....etc... and where are the photos of Cozy cabins and rustic retreats? An old Airstream...? Gushy wordy, fluffy, puffy.I found it a feeble attempt at "poetry"...or something other than great cabins and retreats. Many, many wasted pages. All attempts at sizzle and no steak. Wish I had left it at the seller's. Also, the cover was different than what it shows here. It looks like a book on cabins and cottages, but its focus is not there.Sherrie G

We live in an age when technology moves faster than we do, where noise levels are high, air is polluted - and our homes are often in the center of this frenzy. No wonder we want to escape and be free. With irresistible photography by Chris Tubbs, this book is about making that wish come true. As Jo Denbury and Ali Watkinson show, your hideaway needn't be large or grand; It needn't be far from home or expensive. What is important is that it is an expression of yourself. Whether you long for a cozy cabin in the Catskills or a converted barn in southern France, this is a book that will inspire and inform.

About the Author Jo Denbury's passion is the sea and whenever she has the chance she escapes to her coastal hideaway in southern England. She is Associate Editor of the Telegraph Magazine. Prior to that she was Features Director at Elle Decoration and worked for various national Magazines. Havens and Hideaways is Jo's first book. Chris Tubbs is a French-born photographer, working in London, specializing in design, interiors, and architecture. Chris's work has been published in major international magazines, including Elle (UK, Germany, and Spain), Elle Decoration, House and Garden, Travel and Leisure, Blueprint, and Harper's Bazaar.
