John J. G. Blumenson : Identifying American Architecture: A Pictorial Guide to Styles and Terms, 1600-1945

before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Identifying American Architecture: A Pictorial Guide to Styles and Terms, 1600-1945:

As a lover of American architecture, I enjoyed so many historical tidbits. Unfortunately, the book had some less than clear photos and illustrations. In spite of the mediocre visuals, I felt the information certainly made up for this. The author kindly gave locations of the featured structures, should one be so inclined to visit in person.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Close to perfectBy A66eyroadI've been looking for a book like this for years. While it's not in color, and some of the pictures in the book are a little grainy, the information is exactly what I wanted. The book is also a good size for keeping in the glove compartment of the car.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Used to be useful, now worthless due to greedy cheap reprintBy LolitaThis book is in reprint - and they went CHEAP! Can barely make out architectural features in this pixilated reproduction, which pretty much makes the book worthless!!

What styles of architecture are found in your neighborhood--Georgian, Prairie, International, Spanish, Colonial Revival? This book enables the reader to determine styles and identify architectural terms by comparing real buildings with the book's many photographs. 214 photographs

Blumenson has called out stylistic details and architectural terms in the book's 214 chronological photographs. This guide will help you identify (and write about) not only homes, but also banks, churches and other buildings that may have punctuated your ancestors' town. (Sharon DeBartolo Carmack Family Tree Magazine, October 2003)An extremely 'user friendly' identification tool, Identifying American Architecture is highly recommended for both students of American architecture and the non-specialist general reader with an interest in identifying architectural classifications of buildings they encounter on trips and excursions throughout the country or in their own neighborhoods. (Wisconsin Bookwatch)
