Lot's of great ideas beautiful homesBy Bruce JonesThis book is filled with great ideas for people looking for "contemporary" interiors. Some stunning homes, complete with interesting unusual furnishings. I've been looking at a lot of Interior Design books lately (just bought a new house) and this is the best so far.

In the renaissance of a great tradition, many of the most beautiful and innovative interiors in America are being designed by architects. Inside Architecture documents this trend and features the work of some of the premier architects in this country, including many of their own homes. The twenty-two projects shown are varied and personal, and represent a multiplicity of approaches, locations, and styles. Yet all these interiors share an intelligence and an integrity that give them great impact. Beautifully illustrated with original photographs by Judith Watts, Inside Architecture reveals the avant-garde residences of architects on the cutting edge of design, and illustrates how such masters as Michael Graves, Charles Gwathmey, Hugh Newell Jacobsen, and Robert Venturi and Denise Scott Brown live today.

From Booklist House Beautiful editor Zevon invites us to a nonrestricted look inside the homes of many of America's top architects. World-recognized professionals such as Michael Graves, Charles Gwathmey, and Stanley Tigerman, plus 17 others, subject both their philosophies and their interior design to public scrutiny--and, perhaps, to just a bit of innocent voyeurism. As the exquisite color photos by Judith Watts bear out, there is no one vision. For instance, over the years, Graves has elaborated on simple Italian stone masonry in his New Jersey home, building it into a lush villa replete with Biedermeier and other period furnishings. In the end, it becomes clear to the viewer that every space has a purpose. Beyond that, the making of interiors involves a wondrous imagination, a vibrant use of color, and the courage to make a personal statement. Directory of architects appended.
